SAEKER

Electrical safety and safe isolation for employees undertaking basic electrical works

Self-study

Course details

Introduction

This course has been specifically designed to provide maintenance engineers and handymen with the competency required to undertake a narrow scope of electrical work safely and with confidence.

Tasks such as like-for-like replacement of damaged socket covers, light switches and other fittings are routinely carried out in the home but at work such activities fall under the Electricity at Work Regulations 1989 which require persons to be competent to avoid serious or even fatal electric shock accidents and fires.

Who is this course for?

The course is intended for maintenance personnel who need to carry out basic electrical tasks such as like-for-like replacement of damaged socket covers, light switches and other fittings as part of their work.

There are six modules to be completed:

- Introduction and dangers of electricity
- Legislation and competency
- + Safe isolation of electrical systems and equipment
- Identification and in-service user / formal visual inspection of electrical appliances
- Changing electrical appliance plugs
- Working at height

Expected self-study time

The course is designed to be completed in one sitting and will take around one and half hours.

Course pack

You will be provided with a delegate pack containing a professionally designed and fully illustrated workbook, a modular DVD and a user-guide. Don't worry if you haven't got access to a DVD player, there is also a link to enable the video to be viewed online.

The course pack also has a permit to work included for low voltage like-for-like electrical works that can be freely copied and used as part of your safe system of work.

Assessment

Once the workbook is completed, it is returned to Saeker for internal verification and then returned to the delegate with feedback. A certificate of completion will be issued to all delegates who successfully complete the learning programme.

Cost

The total cost per delegate for the course pack, internal verification, certification and postage is £99.00.

How to book

For further information or to purchase a delegate course pack, please contact us by telephone on 03303 338 433 or by email to support@saeker.co.uk

We will need the following information for each delegate:

Name

Email address

Name and address

of workplace